Josephine Giacco, OCMEA Distinguished Service Award Recipient, NYSBDA Outstanding Band Director, and New York State Teacher of the Year nominee, is sorely missed by the teachers and student musicians of Orange County and New York State.

Josephine was a longtime teacher in the Washingtonville School District, as well as a music advocate in the county and the state. An accomplished musician, she performed with numerous organizations, including the Greater Newburgh Symphony Orchestra and the OCMEA String Ensemble.

In her years as an OCMEA Executive Board member, Josephine initiated many of the policies and programs in use today including the OCMEA Conference Day. As Educational Director, she created the OPUS in-service series, which has educated and nurtured novice and master teachers alike. A strong advocate for string education, Josephine was instrumental in the development and expansion of the string programs in the All County Festivals.

Josephine is remembered for her dedication to music education, her countless hours of service, her leadership, her perseverance, and her concern for others. What better way to honor Josephine than to work to perpetuate the qualities she exemplified. As a tribute to Josephine, OCMEA is proud to sponsor the Josephine Giacco Memorial Music Award.

This scholarship will be given to a college bound senior majoring in music education who demonstrates the qualities possessed by Josephine. The scholarship will be funded by friends, relatives and many of the teachers Josephine inspired and nurtured over the years, as well as music organizations and businesses.
